++ More Info

During pre-production, GM codenamed the vehicle 'Panther'. The name 'Camaro', that was decided upon before production began, in French is slang for 'friend' but in pony-car slang, the name means 'Mustang killer'. To compete in the pony-car arena, General Motors offered this 5.7 liter eight-cylinder engine in 1967 that produced nearly 300 horsepower. The RS (Rally Sport) package with its hidden headlights and revised exterior rocker trim was the most popular of this highly customizable model that offered over seventy factory and forty dealer options.
